Anthony was educated in the Lee County and Sumter County School Systems. He was a 1975 graduate of Plains High School. Following high school graduation, he married his high school sweetheart, Bernice Smith. Together, they built a cheerful home life in Sumter County. His career path led him to Imery's Mulcoa Plant in Andersonville, GA. He worked there for 30 years as a supervisor, where he was respected for his dedication and leadership.

Anthony's spiritual connection was formed at the Old Antioch Baptist Church. He and his family fellowshiped regularly, and he worked closely with the Antioch Brotherhood. He became a member of the church and continued to actively support its ministries. He sang in the Men's Choir, volunteered at events, and was known for his dedication. Declining health eventually limited his involvement, but his service left a lasting impact on the congregation.

Yet, his straightforwardness was always balanced by his sense of humor. He frequently made lighthearted jokes that brought smiles to those around him. The weekly calls to his cousins during "Cousin Thursdays." served to bond and connect family from across the country. He found reward in raising livestock, hunting and fishing. Anthony's passion for automobiles frequently led him to attend and enter his vintage cars into various car shows.
